1. GENERAL PROGRAM INFORMATION

What is the West Coast Institute?

The West Coast Institute for Studies in Anthroposophy is a training institute in British Columbia, Canada, which provides courses for individuals who wish to learn more about Anthroposophy, as expounded by Rudolf Steiner and others, and about Waldorf Education that has been developed out of the insights of Anthroposophy. The West Coast Institute for Studies in Anthroposophy was incorporated under the Society Act in British Columbia in 1998. It is a Developing Member of, and recognized by, the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America (AWSNA). This program is also registered with the Private Career Training Institutions Agency of British Columbia (PCTIA). A tax deduction receipt to show payment of tuition fees will be provided for all Canadian students in accordance with Canada Customs and Revenue Agency guidelines.

What is Anthroposophy?

“The consciousness of one’s humanity,” according to Rudolf Steiner, stands at the opening of the 21st century. Anthroposophy is a way of knowing ourselves as human beings. Grounded in an understanding of human destiny, Steiner’s life and work embraces the fields of education, the arts, the sciences, medicine, banking, biodynamic agriculture, and social and religious renewal. The programs and courses offered by the West Coast Institute for Studies in Anthroposophy arise out of indications given by Rudolf Steiner in these various fields, and are open to all who seek to widen and deepen their consciousness of what it means to be human in our time.

What is the Aim of this Program?

Many challenges confront the healthy development of the child in our time. This program of professional grades teacher training in Waldorf Education is offered to those who seek to deepen their understanding of the experiences which life brings them. It will help them to recognize the culturally renewing impulses of our time within which the work of the Waldorf teacher is an essential activity. Students will be expected to attend all aspects of the program.

How is this Program Structured?

This is a four-year, part-time program. Throughout the four years, studies in Anthroposophy and Waldorf Education are interwoven with artistic and practical subjects. Students will study books on Anthroposophy, Waldorf Education and other relevant texts. The emphasis will be on understanding all aspects of child development. The first year serves as an important orientation year in which students become familiar with the concepts and ideas that are part of the Anthroposophical approach to education, as well as covering the first two grades of the Waldorf curriculum. The following three-years take that familiarity and knowledge for granted and build upon it. Each year is made up of a three-week intensive session in the summer, together with a five-day session each Fall and a six-day session each Spring. The three-week session will be held at the Shawnigan Lake School, near Duncan, on Vancouver Island, whilst the Fall and Spring sessions take place in North Vancouver, BC. During the rest of the year, students will carry out assignments, and mentoring sessions, an observation week, and practicums will be arranged.

The artistic courses have a two-fold purpose: to enhance personal self-development and creativity, and to provide a basis for the work of the teacher. Courses in painting, eurythmy, speech, singing, music, story-telling, clay-modelling, woodwork and Spacial Dynamics are among those offered. The development of a wide range of practical skills will enrich and support students as they implement the principles and practices of Waldorf Education. A major aim of the training is to reinforce independent thinking and self-reliance in each student, and also to awaken enthusiasm and creativity.

What are the Dates of this Program?

The dates of classes for the new intake's first summer session are July 5th – 23rd, 2010. Registration and orientation will take place on the weekend prior to the start of classes. The Fall session's dates for the first year are November 10th – 14th, 2010, and the Spring session's dates are February 20th – 26th, 2011, with registration and a welcome opening the evening or afternoon before each of the sessions.

Successful Completion of this Program:

Students who successfully complete the full four-year, part-time program will be recognized as qualified and trained Waldorf teachers, and will receive a Waldorf Teaching Certificate. This Certificate will carry the approval and authority of the Association of Waldorf Schools of North America (AWSNA), as well as that of the West Coast Institute for Studies in Anthroposophy (WCI).

NOTE: Teachers must possess a BC. Provincial Teaching Certificate, or a degree that would qualify them to receive an Independent Schools Teaching Certificate, if they wish to teach in the Grades in a Waldorf School in British Columbia or Alberta, licensed by the respective Ministry of Education.

2. REGISTRATION INFORMATION

What are the Program Fees?

The cost of the three-week summer session, together with the five-day and six-day sessions in the Fall and the Spring, is $4,400.00 CDN for each year. Program fees can, if preferred, be paid by installments, one month in advance, prior to each session. After this (postmarked) deadline, a late fee of $100.00 will be charged. Cancellations will be refunded in accordance with the requirements of the Private Career Training Institution Agency (PCTIA) of British Columbia. The West Coast Institute for Studies in Anthroposophy reserves the right to make changes to fees, policies, regulations and courses when deemed necessary, and as permitted by PCTIA.

First Year: Recapturing Our Ideals

Description

The First Year is a prerequisite for participation in the full Waldorf Teacher Training Program, unless – in the judgment of the Program Director – a student’s previous studies and experiences would not make this essential. The emphasis will be on exploring the ideas of Rudolf Steiner and the practical ways in which these ideas have been applied in society. Particularly important will be the need to gain an understanding of the nature of the human being and of the evolution of human consciousness, since they form the essential basis for the work of the teacher within Waldorf Education, and provide a context for the entire Waldorf curriculum. A significant portion of time will be given over to the practice of the Arts, so that dormant artistic perceptions and imaginative capacities in those who take part, might spring to life, grow, and thereby contribute to a time of cultural enrichment and personal growth. This first year will include observation and phenomenology; the rhythms and festivals of the year; the path of inner development; artistic experience as a path of self-development; Rudolf Steiner’s life and work; social and anti-social forces in our time, the human double, and the curriculum for Grade One and Two. An Observation Week in a Waldorf school will be arranged for this first year.

Third Year: A Deeper Understanding of the Task:

Description

Emphasis will be put on awakening the faculties of the teacher, and developing his/her creativity, as a preparation for becoming a qualified Waldorf Teacher. It is vital that throughout all years of this teacher training program, the artistic work is continued strongly and that, during this third year of training, the first results of that inner activity - resulting directly from such artistic involvement - can be connected up with the outer tasks of the teacher. This requires a deeper understanding of the art of teaching, enlivened with many practical ideas taken directly from Rudolf Steiner's courses with the first Waldorf teachers in the first Waldorf School. A practicum will provide an opportunity for the student to further develop the progression and to put into practice what has been gleaned from the work in the classroom. Practicum requirements in these two final years will depend on individual circumstances, including whether or not the student is already teaching in the classroom. The Waldorf curriculum focus for this third year of training will be on Grades 5 and 6. A practicum will be arranged for three weeks this year.
